In the current dynamic environment, many companies find that they have depreciating assets and tight cash flows, often leading to the need to address the situation with bankers.

Cooney Carey has developed trusted relationships with a number of national and international banks to undertake analytical studies which enable them to see the true picture of their customers' assets. Working in tandem with the banks' customers, Cooney Carey undertakes forensic analysis and provides detailed reports on the current situation and likely future prospects. With the bank's support and the commitment of the customer, strategies are crafted to enable the business to restructure and survive.
